

Arolwg Fynwent Capel Horeb

Horeb Chapel Graveyard Survey

Spencer Hughes, Richard Thomas, Tim Day – 2018

A. INTRODUCTION

1. BRIEF HISTORY OF CAPEL HOREB

Although the community predates the founding of the chapel, the village of Horeb (meaning 'Mountain of God') gained its name from 'Horeb Particular Baptist Chapel', now closed. In an article to commemorate the centenary of the chapel, the renowned Welsh writer, preacher and minister of Horeb, David Bowen (Bardic name 'Myfyr Hefin') wrote of the earliest reference to this village as being 'Horeb, ger Llanelli'. So, the earliest references were to 'Horeb, near Llanelli', with no reference to its proximity to Five Roads. In other words, Horeb had a distinct identity thanks to the community which formed around the chapel.

The chapel has been described by the Royal Commission on Ancient Monuments as being: "built in the Simple Round-Headed style of the gable entry type. The building is Grade 2 listed as a 'good mid-Victorian rural chapel, with much intact original detail'". Again, it was given a Grade II listing by Cadw in October 1998, stating the following: "A rural chapel in simple Classical style, built in irregularly coursed local sandstone laid in a mortar of white lime incorporating course grit ...".

The first Baptist Church in the area was set up in Felinfoel, and ministers of Adulam Chapel began preaching in the Gwendraeth Valley in the latter part of the 18th century. They even held services in local farms such as Minhurtach and Gellihir from around 1815. In 1832, Isaac Griffiths, a freeholder from Minhurtach donated land on a 999 year lease at a cost of 1 shilling (5 pence) per annum so that a permanent chapel could be erected. He also donated the stones to be used, as well as giving freely of his labour, along with Aaron Jenkins, Gellihir, whose farm carts were used to transport the stones used in the building work. Aaron Jenkins was known as 'a prayer warrior' in the community, using Gellihir for prayer meetings for some years. Though small, the building work was completed in July 1832 at a cost of £200.

Services were originally held at 7pm each Sunday, until Adulam gave permission for morning services to be held as well. At first, the chapel did not appoint a minister, and a number of the members would take on leadership roles, including preaching and baptising. One such was Elias Davies who, in 1861, was recorded as officiating at Sunday services at least once per month. Daniel Davies, the first minister to be appointed to Horeb, as well as being minister of Bethesda, Ponthenry established the practice of baptising members in the Lliedi river, a practice that continued for many years. It remained a branch of Adulam Chapel until its 31 members gained recognition for Horeb to be a chapel in its own right in 1837. This is recorded in the proceedings of the Carmarthenshire Baptist Assembly of 6th June 1837: "That the Church in Horeb, near to Llanelli, is accepted as a member of the Assembly".

In 1868, it was decided to build a new chapel at a cost of £700. Services continued to be held in the village school until completion of the building in April 1869. The first sermon was preached by Daniel Davies, followed by two members, Cornelius Griffiths and J.G. Phillips. A new harmonium was also bought for the chapel at a cost of £12.

In 1986, the BBC's Domesday Reloaded project reported, "There are indications that church attendance in the area is in decline". By then, Horeb Chapel membership had dropped to 23, half of whom attended the Sunday afternoon service in Welsh. The final service held in Horeb Chapel was on 12th January 2005, with the remaining 5 members deciding to close the chapel on 31st December 2005 and to sell the building. The money belonging to the Chapel was divided between charities including the Bryngwyn Hospice in Llanelli and the Noah's Ark Hospice in Cardiff.

After its closure in 2005, there has been a rapid decline in the condition of Horeb Chapel and its graveyard. To enable relatives of those buried there and those with an interest in local history to gain access to this vital historical landmark, the Society has worked with the owners of the chapel to improve things. Since 2016/17 work has been going on to clear the mass of vegetation which has grown over the gravestones.

3. SURVEY OF THE CEMETERY

The survey was conducted during the summer and autumn of 2018, with the kind permission of the owners, Drs Paul and Joanna Flynn. Richard Thomas, Spencer Hughes and Tim Day carried out a visual survey of each gravestone, transcribing their inscriptions and subsequently analysing them. The wording of each gravestone has been recorded as written; misspellings have not been corrected.
